Alison Anderson, Member for Macdonnell, Northern Territory Government, made an opening speech that noted Solar Systems' leadership shown in partnering with the indigenous community for the event.

Solar Systems Managing Director, Dave Holland, and President CEO Ntaria (Hermannsburg) Council, Gus Williams, officially opened the power station.

In addition to over 200 community members, nearly 40 other invitees attended from the Australian Greenhouse Office, Territory Government departments, local government and Solar Systems suppliers.

The event included a free barbeque, concert and site visits to the power station. The Ntaria Choir, Solar Systems band 'The Concentrators' and local musician Warren H. Williams played at the event. Imparja TV kids character Yamba (a honey ant) made a surprise appearance.

Solar Systems donated sports equipment for the local kids' sports teams and a commemorative plaque for the Ntaria Council. Introductory letters from kids in Glenferrie Primary School in Hawthorn, Victoria were presented to the principal of the Hermannsburg Primary School for the beginning of a cultural exchange program.

The informal event celebrates Solar Systems ongoing relationship with the Hermannsburg community. The company places a high value on corporate community responsibilities.
